

WRECK OF MISSING PLANE FOUND, REPORT

'ROUND 'N' 'ROUND

Among the nation's heroes must be listed the editor who took Asa Keyes to task recently for not having used enough forethought. When Keyes stated that his life might be in danger if he is confined in San Quentin with some 500 odd men there, the scribe commented that Keyes might have thought of that fact several years ago when he was committing the crime which is the cause of his sentence.

Continuing the editorial comment is made that "while politics undoubtedly played an important part in Keyes' arrest and conviction, there seems to be little question about his guilt."

Oh, my! Oh, my! Mr. Editor do you really mean to say that maybe there are some other crooked politicians holding office in this country, and if the die happens to be cast against them they may be made to pay the penalty? There just naturally isn't any justice in this country, even the politicians aren't safe any more—especially if they happen to be on the losing side.

Among life's pitiful pictures is the man who is too small mentally and from experience to properly perform his duties. He is the type who insists that "now I don't think we had better have any publicity on that, because the public would not understand." Too bad, too bad, because for some reason or other the public always seems to find out.

The dark ages, when the general mass of the public was too ignorant to understand what was really the best for them, are pages in history and not proper mental fodder for the average citizen of today.

Then there's the office hanger-on who reminds us that news runs in cycles. We've noticed that—but always thought that the power of suggestion had a great deal to do with it. There are always certain numbers of persons who are ready to depart from this vale of tears. When someone of enough prominence happens to be in the same state of mind and uses a particular type of poison to end it all, it is usually a good bet that several others will use the same method. Not will use the same method. Not will use the same method. Not will use the same method.

And the naval disarmament conference seems to have gone the way of most disarmament conferences. And we repeat from this column of several months ago—when we scrap all the locks on our doors and our policemen are busy at some other occupation then we will be willing to believe that it is time to scrap our national policemen.

A cursory study of history will reveal that there has been war for the last 200 years every war for the last 200 years has been the "last one." Talk of world peace has followed every major conflict in which more than two nations were involved. The theory of peace is marvelous, but as long as our courts are forced to work overtime, world peace will remain just that—a theory.

Set-up boxing bouts are not as popular in this country as they were at one time. At last reports the managers of the Miami fiasco figured that they had lost at least $75,000 and they're not through figuring yet. The fistie game can get along very well without such exhibitions as was presented in the southern arena.

Now Dallas, Tex., is trying to steal some of the glory away from the Windy City. "Worse Than Chicago" said a recent headline in a Dallas paper in reporting two new murders. The story pointed out that the murder average had been steadily increasing at an alarming rate, during the last three years and that the average for the present year was far beyond that of any previous year.

NO SIGNS OF LIFE SEEN AT CRASH

SAN BERNARDINO, Mar. 3.—(U.P.)—Mounted searchers who left Lake Arrowhead today to trace a report that the wreckage of a missing Western Air Express plane lay twisted in an isolated canyon had not returned to the resort late tonight.

They were a rough section of the San Bernardino mountain country where J. T. Barber, a young rancher, said he had viewed the wreckage of a plane through binoculars. There was no sign of the plane's crew of three, he said.

No word had been received from the searching party led by Barber and a deputy sheriff at 10 p. m. The hunt was to have taken them 20 miles northeast of Lake Arrowhead and the time required was difficult to estimate. It was possible that the men might not return tonight.

Meanwhile, two Western Air Express planes had returned to Los Angeles after flying over the territory in which Barber said he saw the wreckage. The pilot of the two ships reported that they had found nothing in the section Barber described.

The three men aboard the plane when it took off from Kingman, Ariz., for Los Angeles were James Doles, pilot; A. W. Beiber, copilot; and John W. Slaton, steward.

Party Starts

While his wife, Florence was on the front porch to get the morning mail yesterday, Utterback shot himself through the heart with a revolver.

Despondency over illness is believed to have been the cause for his suicide.

He is survived by his wife and two brothers, one in San Francisco and one in Oakland.

A letter found in his clothes, indicated that Utterback had planned on taking his life.

The letter was addressed to his wife and asked her forgiveness for his suicide, and declared she had been a "dear wife" to him.

PITTSBURG IN LICENSE DRIVE

PITTSBURG, March 3.—More than 50 business men and delivery wagon drivers were arrested here today and charged with violation of a city ordinance requiring a municipal license to conduct business.

Although most of the arrests made were merchants owning small stores, three drivers of bread trucks were hauled from their vehicles and jailed because the out of town concerns they represented had not met the municipal charges.

All of those arrested were released on bail of $50 each, and were cited to appear later to answer complaints.

If authorities desire to inflict penalty other than the collection of the license fees with a penalty of 25 percent added, those accused face maximum fines of $300 each.

Police charge that those arrested failed to obtain city licenses since Jan. 1, despite repeated official warnings.

PAVE JUROR GETS DEATH THREAT

OAKLAND, March 3.—With the "vice" situation temporarily disposed of following the voting of six indictments and an "accusation" last week, the Oakland "paving scandal" once more jumped into the limelight when the Alameda County Grand Jury resumed its investigation of eastbay graft today.

It was freely predicted around courthouse circles at the close of the day's investigation, that the probe will result in the issuing of a new group of indictments against those implicated in the paving graft.

It was revealed today that several indictments have already been prepared, in readiness for the jury should it decide to act at its next session Wednesday.

Sensational testimony was given by the jury today by Frank M. Phillips, former city paving inspector, and Mandy Diggs, eastbay architect.

Juror Threatened

The receiving of a death note by Frank W. Leavitt, foreman of the grand jury, which ordered him to "return true bills against Oakland's thieves or face the end of a rope," was the subject of the beginning of an investigation by District Attorney Earl Warren's operatives late today.

Phillips, who has admitted accepting money from the California Construction company, told the jury that the Columbian Park paving job was not done according to specifications, and that the concrete finishers employed by the company were so incompetent they should have "been kicked off the job."

Direct Charge

HANDKERCHIEF CAUSES FINE

D. J. Sullivan, of Port Costa, paid a fine of $5 in the El Cerrito police court yesterday, all because Traffic Officer Howard Thulen possessed a large handkerchief.

According to police reports, Thulen stopped a car driven by Sullivan, at Curtis and Blake streets, El Cerrito, on Sunday night. Sullivan with Sullivan was P. D. Sullivan, also of Port Costa, who claims no relationship to the driver.

According to police, D. J. Sullivan threw a quart bottle of liquor into the street when Thulen started to search the car. The bottle broke into half and the liquid formed a puddle in the street.

Thulen refused to be downhearted. He drew his handkerchief, sopped up the liquor and then wrung it out, emptying the whiskey into the top half of the broken bottle.

There was enough evidence, Police Judge J. F. Plank decided, to fine D. J. Sullivan $50 on a charge of illegal possession of liquor.

P. D. Sullivan was released, only to be rearrested a few minutes later by El Cerrito police on a charge of disturbing the peace and intoxication. Police reported that he was found trying to start a car that didn't belong to him. He was fined $25.

Twenty-six Richmond firemen, headed by Fire Chief William P. Cooper, attended the first day session of a fire school held in San Francisco yesterday under the direction of the International Fire Chiefs' association.

The course, which is being attended by firemen of the eastbay, is an extension course by the Los Angeles Fire College. Subjects taken up at the three day session include fire fighting, equipment and fire prevention.

The courses are being held at a San Francisco fire hall, loaned by Fire Chief C. J. Brennan of San Francisco. Los Angeles and San Francisco fire departments have loaned equipment for the school.

The latest methods of fire fighting, the use and care of special equipment and how fires can be prevented are discussed by leading firemen.

A number of Richmond firemen will attend the courses today and tomorrow.

Fish Flour At Local Dock

Fish flour, 300 tons of it, was unloaded at the Richmond inner harbor yesterday morning from the steamer San Antonio of the South Coast Steamship company.

A few hours after the flour was unloaded it was transferred to the holds of the North German Lloyd steamer, Donau, to be transported to Germany where the flour will be made into fish cakes.

The Donau also was loading a cargo of 13,200 tons of fishbone fertilizer for Germany.

The fish flour and fertilizer were brought here from Monterey canneries.

Council Hears Objections On New Gas Ruling

After an extended discussion in which S. R. Welch of the Seventeenth street garage took an active part, and in which he objected to the new ordinance regulating the handling and storage of petroleum products, the city council last evening decided that the objections were not well taken, and refused to take any action.

Chief W. P. Cooper of the fire department took exceptions to the statements of Welch, claiming that of all of the garagemen in the city, he was the only one making objections. Cooper stated the rest of the garage men were well satisfied with the new ordinance.

TAFT AGAIN PUZZLES DOCTORS

WASHINGTON, March 3.—(U.P.)—After visiting William H. Taft shortly before 11 o'clock tonight, his two physicians said his condition remained unchanged from earlier in the day when slight improvement was reported.

Taft was sleeping at the time his physicians called and gave every indication that he would spend another comfortable night. All lights were put out in the Taft home after the doctors left.

For five days Taft has been lingering between life and death, and although today's bulletins said the 72-year old former president and chief justice had rallied somewhat, his physicians still held to the belief he could not survive his critical illness.

Condition Same

Late today Dr. Thomas A. Clayton after one of his usual visits to the Taft home on Wyoming avenue, said Taft's condition had remained about the same throughout the day. A bulletin issued by Dr. Clayton and his colleague, Dr. Francis Hagner this morning said: "He was improved slightly and unless some sudden change occurs, due to the arterio-sclerosis, his term of life for the present is undetermined."

Tonight's bulletin, issued at 6:55 p. m. after the doctor's visit, said merely "there is no change in the condition of the former chief justice."

Informally the physicians said Taft still was very sick and that there was no change in their diagnosis of several days ago that he was dying. His recovery has gained back some of the ground he lost in his sinking spell, but the doctors would not say there was any hope for recovery.

Many letters wishing Taft good cheer and good luck, were brought to the house today. These and the other felicitations he has received showed that the nation he served for 40 years has a deep regard for him and the work he accomplished.

There was a harkening back today to the time when Taft was in his prime. Mrs. James J. Parnele, Washington society leader, drove up to the Taft home in a handsome horse drawn brougham, reminiscent of the Taft era in American politics.

Every state in the union, the District of Columbia, Alaska, the Hawaiian Islands and 38 foreign countries are represented in the 5362 voters who have registered so far with A. C. Faris, city clerk and chief registration deputy for this section.

Registration deputies up to five o'clock yesterday afternoon had turned in 5362 registrations with Faris. Of the foreign countries represented in the registrations Italy is leading by a big majority, the records of Faris indicated.

The registrations to date represent about one half of the number which appeared on the great register last year.

A Tea Time Story

THE other day, when an icy wind was driving frozen snowflakes over desolate-looking streets, I stepped into a tiny tea-room around the corner just to warm up a little over a steaming cup. And there I found at a table Satan sitting, alone, lonely, forlorn, and infinitely bored. Somehow I felt impelled to speak to him, cheer him, show him some human sympathy—he really looked devilishly miserable. So I went over to his table, offered him a cigarette and began the usual conversation.

"Awful weather," I said. "I am frozen through and through."

"Yes," admitted Satan. "It's pretty bad, but then, what can you expect? After all, it's winter."

"For you it must be especially disagreeable," I ventured then. "You are accustomed to quite other temperatures."

Satan looked coldly at me. "How so?" he asked.

I stammered, embarrassed: "Well, so far as I know, you have a pretty hot damn at your place; the hellish fires, the burning sinners, and so on, that must be very warm."

Satan interrupted me impatiently. "It's incredible," he exclaimed, "the childish superstition of you people. Even you, a literary man, cultivated, enlightened, can repeat such nonsensical nursery fables. Let me assure you that you are greatly mistaken. We enjoy the most perfect climate—a subtle blending of the freshness of spring and the mild mellowness of fall—in our gardens; they are more beautiful than your limited fancy can imagine—blossoms and fruit mingle on the very same tree. Our birds have the colors of rainbows and at the same time they sing with most melodious trills. And the perfume of our flowers is simply unsurpassable. Your ideas of my abode are, therefore, vastly incorrect."

I blushed under his reproach, but my curiosity was piqued. I wanted to know more. So I persisted. "And your food? I asked timidly. "The damned, what?"

He did not let me continue. He lifted his hand and his face expressed his pained disapproval. "What words," he sighed, "what expressions, what crudities! Lost souls—damned—I am grieved to hear you speak like this. Our guests, as we call them, are made perfectly free in the place, and whatever we can do to provide amusement and entertainment for them is done in the most elaborate manner. Concerts, theatres, drivers, art exhibitions, bals masques—all this is offered in profusion. And for those with more exacting and scholarly tastes we have libraries of rare books and manuscripts, collections of prints and etchings, anything, in short, you can imagine. We do our best to gratify every possible wish. No expense is too great."

I was staring with surprise. "How wonderful!" I exclaimed. "Why, that sounds more like heaven than anything else."

Satan seemed pleased. "Yes, our place is an exact replica of heaven," he confided. "Anything you can get there we have too, and even more elegant, more elaborate, more exquisite, more subtle. Our guests get everything just as in heaven, only—"

"Only?" I repeated with a vague terror clutching my heart.

"Only," said Satan sadly, "they can never, even not for one moment, forget that they are not in heaven."

"And that," I asked, "that is—"

"Yes," answered Satan wearily, "that is it. To have everything heaven can grant you, and yet not feel in heaven—that's hell."

And while I was still pondering over these awful words he disappeared from my table.

Helping the School Child

By Emily Hoffman

JANE began crying and her mother in an exasperated tone exclaimed, "toothache again?" After applying toothache drops she turned to her girl and said, "I don't know what I'll ever do with Jane! Nearly every evening a toothache sets in and the poor child hardly ever can do her home work."

This mother could not be persuaded to take Jane to a dentist because she could "see no sense in wasting money on baby teeth." She is one of many mothers who do not realize the dangers resulting from neglect of the temporary teeth. Neither do they know that neglected teeth are often the cause of the child's failure in school.

In school children are taught that the teeth must receive proper care, but the large majority will do nothing about it unless there is home co-operation with the school.

It has been estimated that eight out of every ten school children have defective teeth. This is a serious condition and it seems quite necessary to educate parents that care of the teeth is a very essential part of the home hygiene training.

Many mothers insist upon the teeth being brushed twice a day but they never inspect the teeth until the child complains of a toothache and to their dismay they find it is too late to save that six year molar which set is so often mistaken by mothers as temporary teeth, and the removal of the molar means that the lifetime of the permanent set is gone and mastication is impaired.

Parents who know, understand the importance of preventive dentistry and no defect is too slight to receive prompt attention. The temporary teeth receive as much care as the permanent ones because they receive the means proper development of the jaws, which in turn, means so much in facial appearance.

Every neglected tooth mean the child cannot chew food properly and this may lead to indigestion, and that a diseased tooth may affect the general health, so between the age of two and fourteen their children are placed under the care of a good dentist, consequently they never have a toothache. After the temporary teeth have all been extracted and the permanent ones are forming properly the growing children continue to make semi-annual visits to the dentist's office for inspection.

These parents know that proper foods are necessary to develop strong and healthy teeth. Leaf and stalk vegetables, especially the crisp celery, lettuce and raw cabbage, fruits like apples, which exercise the teeth, whole grain cereals, whole wheat bread, especially crusts, meat that requires chewing, eggs and milk are foods that develop good teeth. Sweets should be restricted—figs, raisins, dates and honey are good sources of sugar.

"DAD, our teacher says George Washington couldn't tell a lie. Why couldn't George Washington tell a lie?"

"Because even as a boy he knew that it was wrong to tell a lie, and his conscience wouldn't let him."

"Why wouldn't his conscience let him?"

"Because his conscience was a very sensitive one and he knew that the ever told a lie it would make him unhappy."

"Can you tell a lie?"

"That's a ridiculous question! Of course I can tell lies, but I don't."

"Didn't you ever tell a lie, Dad?"

"Certainly not."

"Why did you tell Ma her buckwheat cakes were delicious?"

"Because I am a diplomat."

"What's a diplomat?"

"One skilled in diplomacy."

"What's diplomacy?"

"Tact, shrewdness, or skill, in conducting any affair."

"Is a diplomat a liar?"

"Oh, go to bed."

Paris Is Anxious—But Why Worry

Couturiers Are Still Wrought Up Over the Length of Skirts and Fear Paris Will Lose Its Reputation as Dictator of Styles for the Rest of the World

By Coralie Van Paassen

PARIS, February. WITH Parisian hotels filling up with wholesale buyers from New York, London, Berlin, Vienna and Buenos Ayres, the atmosphere in the fashionable dress-making establishments is electric with apprehension and worry. Following the revolt of American women against the ruffles emanating from the Rue de la Paix and the Place Vendôme, decried longer skirts, the couturiers realize that the continuation of their dictatorship depends upon the attitude of the foreign buyers now in town for the semi-annual spring showing. In other words the decisive moment has arrived when it shall be known if Paris is to have another "ease of life as the fashion capital of the world."

British buyers, so far, have proved the most irreconcilable, declaring that if the couturiers are swayed in their creative endeavor by American fancies, which there is marked evidence, they consider Paris to have abdicated from her traditional position of referee of international fashions and that they will turn their attention elsewhere.

Declarations of leading dressmakers that they are unperturbed by the rumblings of a revolt on the part of feminine America, are flatly contradicted by the unusual eagerness to please American buyers and cater to their tastes. Several of the leading fashion houses have turned out two or even more distinct sets of models for the coming season, leaving the way open for foreign buyers to reject a style which does not seem suitable to the taste of their clientele at home.

TWO SETS OF MODELS The double sets of models have given rise to a charge that couturiers are attempting to mystify buyers and that only a vacillating policy can pull Paris out of the quandary in which she finds herself with her supremacy and infallibility threatened since the American women's declaration of independence last fall. The same Parisian houses are announcing simultaneously that skirts will be longer and that skirts will be shorter, or this other inconsistency, that trains will be fashionable and in the same breath that they will be obsolete, or again, that waistlines will be higher—and lower.

The contradictory announcements in a matter where has always reigned an almost touching singleness of purpose only reflects the uncertainty in the minds of the maestros of design. Some French critics go so far as to hint that there is a mild panic in the Rue de la Paix and that couturiers will be spending many sleepless nights until the spring showing is off their hands and the Americans departed. If panic is a strong word, there can be little doubt that the attempts of the couturiers to play safe is causing the greatest confusion, and that the smart feminine sets in the world's great metropolises may be faced with something like two or even more rival fashions during the coming season.

Generally speaking, the designers seem chiefly undecided as to whether they want to make women look like cornucopias or Broadway skyscrapers. Baronne Accorti, guiding spirit of the house of Ardane, gave out the startling news: "I have arranged to show six skirt lengths." Whether these six differing skirt lengths are to coincide with the different functions of the day will be discovered only when this house has its opening.

Great interest has been created by the announcement of the new Archbishop of Paris, Cardinal Verdier, that he favors the short skirt. It is not unmeted, he believes, and is certainly far more practical than the ground-other members of the trade who, naturally, had not anticipated the monkey jacket and were, consequently, at a loss. The fashion seeped down through the preparatory schools and high schools until, at last, it reached the offices and streets. By that time the shops were equipped to meet the demand, but too late—the "monkey jacket" was "out" on the campus and something else was "in."

brushing style of the past. In a general way the Cardinal's opinion goes against the new style evolved in the Rue de la Paix, which the designers are seeking to perpetuate, although camouflaging their real intentions by sowing confusion.

The result of the first timid showings is that if any woman seriously sought to follow what has been shown she would look fit for a masquerade ball.

A SHORTAGE OF MANNEQUINS That there is a widespread shortage of the type of mannequin whose anatomy is flexible enough for all the new designs is not surprising. So great is the mannequin shortage, and so intense the French professional jealousy that lightning strikes have been directed against two of the English designers showing their spring collections to the wholesale buyers here. Just before the "opening" the mannequins walked out, although the wages being paid by the English houses were in excess of those usually paid by the French firms.

good for business. The college girl, however, has a peculiar knack for creating a smart trick of dress which, all too frequently, hides out nothing but despair for those whose money is made in appeasing the feminine appetite for Beauty and chic. Fat men grow lean, lean men grow leaner, and blink buyers develop a snappy manner and unexpected lines between the eyes when even a new fur sweeps the Nation's institutions of education.

THE "MONKEY JACKET" INVENTION A few years ago an enterprising young woman bought a few yards of red flannel, made herself what she called a "monkey jacket," appeared in it on the campus, and within a week every merchant in town had sold the last musty remnants of red flannel which had been encumbering his upper shelves. The red jacket craze swept through the colleges. It was great for the manufacturers of red flannel, who were astonished by their unexpected renaissance, but it was not so good for

THE SMALL FELT HAT

Instead of occupying her mind with the Fourth Dimension, the college girl had turned her attention to felt hats. Again she visited the local dry goods store and emerged with a half-yard of flat felt, from which she concocted a startling new hat at the cost of a few cents. A pricked finger and about two yards of cotton thread, none of which expenditures would cause a manufacturer's heart to flutter with joy. Again there was a stampede. New hats appeared with the rapidity of mushrooms. Innovations were made in the original conception, until milliners forgot their worries and stopped "viewing with alarm" to make some notes and pick up a few ideas. Like the "monkey jacket" fad, the homemade felt hat fever spread widely, winding up, at last, at the 5-and-10 where, for a small expenditure, the materials for headgear could be purchased.

The latest revolution concerns the silk stocking, a luxury so well established these days that a departure from it is something of a shock to the fond makers of gauzy hose. The bare leg fashion gave the silk stocking magnates a bad turn until they hit upon the nude stocking as a fitting retort, but what they will do now is a question, for at most of the women's colleges, old-fashioned cotton stockings have come back into favor.

Preachers can no longer rant at the immodesty of thinly clad legs; slitting lecturers will no longer be disconcerted by slim, silken knees—for a time, at any rate, collegiate legs will be stoutly covered. Whether or not this fad will spread remains to be seen. At any rate, it will not be of long duration, for no college fad lasts long enough for the general public to catch up upon it, let alone for "the trade" to make it into an asset.

MAKING MEN'S FASHIONS

The men's colleges, too, are responsible for more than a classical education. They plead guilty to the soft shirt for daytime wear fashion, and recently to a variation of that same style. The "college man" has decreed that collars on soft shirts be made long and pointed, as befitting a sturdy collegiate neck.

"They buy over 65 per cent. of the soft shirts manufactured," explained a haberdasher, "so it isn't worth his eye brightening, 'you might be able to find some sho'-collared shirts in the basement of some of the stores. We've had to sell them all off cheaply."

And so it goes. There was the garterless era and the sockless era, so it is no wonder that when the college Beau Brummel decrees a tangle style, the manufacturers make a deep bow and rush off in a frenzied effort to meet the demand. The rest of the clothes-wearing populace can shift for itself.

Daudet Looks At Future

Although he has recently been the object of executive clemency, which permitted him to return to France, Leon Daudet, leader of the French Monarchists, does not feel in the least that he should temper his language in regard to the political leaders like M. Herriot or M. Tardieu, who took the initiative in gaining for him an executive pardon. As a matter of fact the air of his native Paris seems to be working wonders on M. Daudet in so far as increasing his powers of invective and vituperation is concerned. He has a whole new stock of epithets, one for each leader, from M. Poincare to M. Briand. He has also, he says, brought new proof with him from Belgium that Germany is planning a new war and a new invasion of France. He places the coming catastrophe between 1932 and 1935. And it there are more than a million and a half war dead in the next struggle, this will be solely the fault of M. Briand, who, according to Daudet, is betraying the interests of France right along in the frequent international conferences that the Foreign Minister attends. "War with Germany is inevitable," says M. Daudet, "unless France repudiates the republican regime and calls back the King." He thinks the coming of John III, will be a great day of reckoning. "Ah," he says at the close of one of his recent marvelously constructed articles, "when that day comes, when Briand and Caillaux and Herriot mount the steps of the guillotine, they may rest assured I will be there!"

Immortals On Index

The Abbe Dimmet, who reaped a remarkable success in America with his book "On the Art of Thinking," figures on the new Vatican Index of forbidden books. This is more difficult for the layman to understand than the presence of the names of Anatole France and Gabriele d'Annunzio. The latter was the object of special anathema two years ago on the occasion when the Italian state announced the publication of a magnificent edition of the poet's collected works. There are a host of other writers, even more distinguished, who are maintained on the list. Descartes, the philosopher, for instance, Bacon also and Montaigne, Spinoza and Voltaire, Thomas Hobbes and David Hume, John Locke and Jean Jacques Rousseau, d'Alembert and Kant, Auguste Comte and John Stuart Mill. Further, Taine, Montesquieu and Saint-Simon. Quaint figures four condemnations, Renan, nineteen; Bergson only four. "Balzac is condemned, Victor Hugo, for 'Notre Dame de Paris' and 'Les Miserables.' George Sand, Emile Zola, Gustave Flaubert, for 'Salambo' and 'Mme. Bovary.' Alexander Dumas, father and son, authors of 'The Three Musketeers' and 'The Lady of the Camellias,' respectively, are condemned for the 'entirety of their works.' One American also, figures on the Index. He is Dr. S. Melamed of Chicago, who composed a 'Psychology of the Jewish Spirit.'

Walls of Jericho

An archaeological expedition operating in Southern Palestine has laid bare a piece of wall on the site of the ancient city of Jericho, which existed long before Joshua invaded the Holy Land, conquered it and shared it out to the tribes of Israel. The stretch of wall just uncovered is about 165 feet long and about twenty feet high. It is not a part of that famous wall, though, which came crashing down on the seventh day as the Levites blew their trumpets, an event that has been the object of considerable speculation and not a little unbelief in the course of the centuries. A German scientist affirmed only recently that the ancient Hebrews had made use of dynamite or some other powerful explosive to break down the walls. Moses, he thought, was a sort of forerunner of Mr. Alfred Nobel and he had handed down the secret to his successor, Joshua ben Nun. Many other fantastic things are attributed to Moses by the same scientist. The archaeologists around Jericho, however, have a piece of wall which is called "magnificent." They go on digging, for they have "ample hopes," we read. Any day now we may hear of the finding of that piece of red string which a certain lady of the locality hung from her boudoir window in the long ago.

When Hemming a Skirt

WHEN changing the hem of a skirt draw threads from the raw edge of the hem for sewing to assure a perfect match. The threads from some fabrics have an annoying habit of kinking. This can be overcome by moistening the thumb of the left hand and placing it on a piece of soap, then with the right hand draw each thread back and forth between the soap and thumb until it becomes smooth and firm. By using the drawn threads the matching in color and texture is so exact that if carefully done the hem-stitching will be quite invisible, as it should be.

Under Cover Man Taken For Ride

PUEBLO, Colo., Mar. 3 (U.P.)—Chicago gangland vengeance was adopted by the bootlegging interests of southwestern Colorado today when William E. Pattison, 38, railroad inspector and undercover man for federal prohibition agents, was "taken for a ride."

His bullet riddled body was found on a prairie seven miles southeast of Pueblo by Charles Pattison, a brother, and a group of searchers.

The body apparently was transferred from an automobile to a horse-drawn vehicle several miles from the city to the spot where it was found.

Pattison and his assistant, Goldie McClain, were kidnapped by two masked men who bound and gagged them and then drove away in an automobile.

McClain was released later by the abductors and was found near Pueblo. He was unable to give authorities any information as to the direction taken by the kidnapers.

LOCAL PARENTS LAUDED FOR CARE OF BABIES

Between 75 and 90 percent of children born in Richmond are born at hospitals, according to Miss Mary Davis, a special nurse for the state bureau of child hygiene, who is making a survey in Richmond, Martinez and Pittsburg. Miss Davis stated that in Pittsburg and Martinez practically all of the children are born at the homes of the parents. This she attributed to the fact that Richmond parents appear to be well able to take care of the hospital expenses.

Miss Davis delivered her interesting talk at the meeting of the Richmond council of P. T. A. yesterday afternoon in the Lincoln school.

She urged members of the P. T. A. to cooperate with the state and have the mothers attend clinics. At these clinics advice will be given to expectant mothers.

A clinic of this sort is expected to be established in Richmond within a short time. Money for these clinics has been appropriated by the state.

Miss Davis will also attend the home nursing class which is held here Wednesday at the Lincoln school under the auspices of the P. T. A. The mothers are hearing lectures on care of children.

ADOPTION OF ONETAH TRIBE POSTPONED

Due to the inability of a degree team from Oakland to be present, the adoption scheduled for last night's meeting of Onetah Tribe of Redmen in the Redmen hall was postponed until April 7. R. Barda presided over the business meeting.

Preliminary steps toward the joining of a mammoth pagant to be held as dedication ceremonies of a monument to Chief Solano, April 6, were taken last night.

Tribes from the entire bay region and as far north as Auburn will participate in the pagant, which will be held at Rockville, four miles west of Fairfield.

A committee consisting of R. Barda, C. E. Daley, C. Xavier, Arthur Pacheco and Roy Voght was appointed to confer with the committees from other lodges at Rockville Sunday.

At this committee meeting, the local delegates will be informed as to the part Onetah tribe will take in the pagant.

The pagant, which is expected to be one of the most stupendous of its kind ever held in local regions, will depict the life of the Indian from the beginning.

The coming of the first white man to this country, the early visits of the Spaniards, the Russians, and the padres and missions will be depicted as will the early settlement of California.

Among the features of the pagant will be the showing of the home life of the Indians and their futile attempts to overcome the white man's invasion.

The gigantic celebration will be held in the open, on the ground of the monument to the Indian chief.

It was announced at the meeting last night that the organization committee would meet at the home of R. Barda, 454 Thirty-fifth street, tomorrow night.

Arrangements are also being made to have the White Eagle tribe in San Francisco present its minstrel show here during the latter part of March or in early April.

"SHAPE AND FASHION—such things will remain" (Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, 1807-1882)

"Coming events cast their shadows before"

AVOID THAT FUTURE SHADOW*

By refraining from over-indulgence, if you would maintain the modern figure of fashion

Women who prize the modern figure with its subtle, seductive curves—men who would keep that trim, proper form, eat healthfully but not immoderately. Banish excessiveness—eliminate abuses. Be moderate—be moderate in all things, even in smoking. When tempted to excess, when your eyes are bigger than your stomach, reach for a Lucky instead. Coming events cast their shadows before. Avoid that future shadow by avoiding over-indulgence if you would maintain the lithe, youthful, modern figure.

Lucky Strike, the finest Cigarette a man ever smoked, made of the finest tobacco—The Cream of the Crop—"IT'S TOASTED." Everyone knows that heat purifies and so "TOASTING" not only removes impurities but adds to the flavor and improves the taste.

"It's toasted"

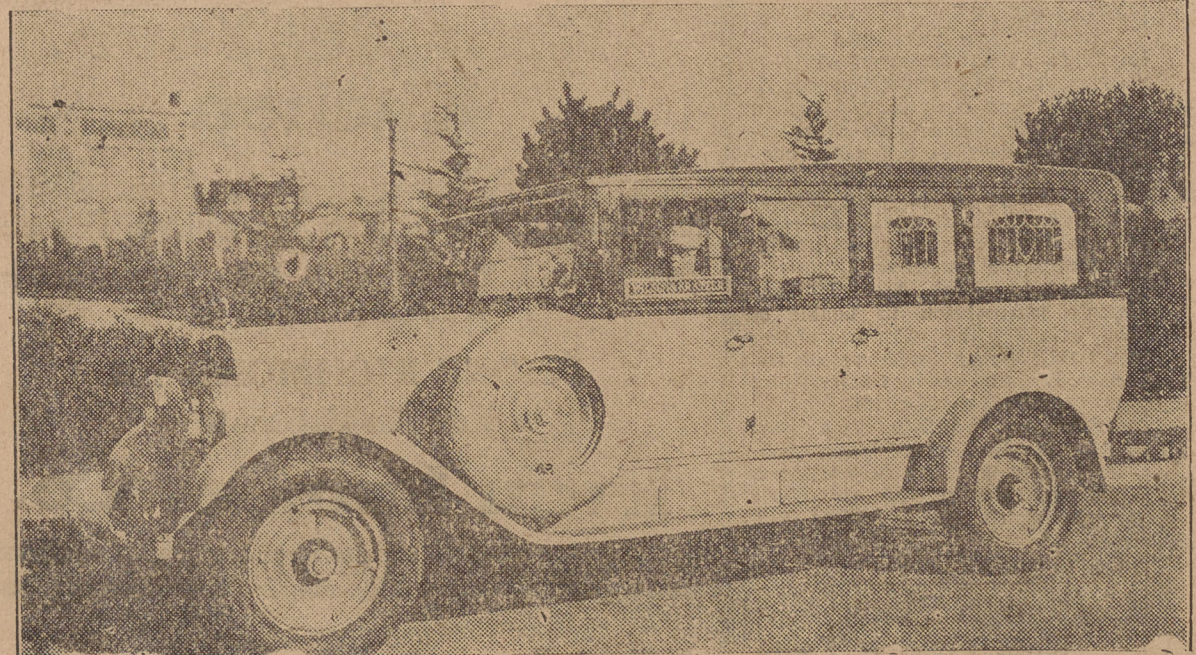

Your Throat Protection—against irritation—against cough.

*Be Moderate! . . . Don't jeopardize the modern form by drastic diets, harmful reducing girdles, fake reducing tablets or other quack "anti-fat" remedies condemned by the Medical profession! Millions of dollars each year are wasted on these ridiculous and dangerous nostrums. Be Sensible! Be Moderate! We do not represent that smoking Lucky Strike Cigarettes will bring modern figures or cause the reduction of flesh. We do declare that when tempted to do yourself too well, if you will "Reach for a Lucky" instead, you will thus avoid over-indulgence in things that cause excess weight and, by avoiding over-indulgence, maintain a modern, graceful form.

CHEVALIER HAS CLEVER PART IN PARADE

"Chorus girls, dressed as bathing beauties, no longer will be able to dance in the center of the Great Sahara desert, or in the corridors of the Congressional library."

This discovery was made by Guy Bolton, who all his life has been having chorus girls do that very thing.

Bolton is the noted playwright and librettist who has written 50 produced plays and musical shows since he started writing for the theater in 1914. Bolton is the author of the libretto for the talking screen's first original musical romance, "The Love Parade," which is now playing at the Fox-California theater.

"The talking screen demands realism and logical situations. On the musical comedy or operetta stage we could do what we pleased as long as the songs were tuneful and the girls pretty. But the old era has passed. This is a new age in the theater, and talking pictures can be praised or blamed, according to the way one wishes to take them. As I intend to devote most of my future writing to the talking screen, I consider it the closest approach to the perfect entertainment medium that has ever been known."

Maurice Chevalier is starred in "The Love Parade."

TARDIEU CALLS MEETING OF CABINET

PARIS, March 3.—UP—Premier Andre Tardieu called out a strenuous program for himself today. He announced he expected to be in London Saturday, taking up naval limitation negotiations where he left off more than two weeks ago.

He said he would call his cabinet together tomorrow to discuss the declaration of policy he will present to the Chamber of Deputies Wednesday afternoon. He also will confer with bankers and Bourse officials in an effort to overcome their previous hostility to his financial program.

Wednesday morning he will hold a cabinet council, at which the finishing touches will be put on the policy declaration. When he faces the deputies the same afternoon he expects to obtain a majority of 40 votes in a confidence test.

Tardieu said all the naval delegates except himself would leave for London Thursday noon, and that he would follow Saturday morning in response to an invitation by Premier J. Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain. MacDonald asked him to spend the weekend with him; The French premier said he would maintain unaltered the position he took at London before—namely, that France must have 724,000 tons of warships by 1936.

The new cabinet will ask the chamber for a confidence vote on a declaration dealing almost entirely with economic and financial problems. The chamber will be asked to vote certain tax reductions, extend the benefits of the soldier bonus, launch a 5,000,000 franc national development project and draft the Hague Reparations accord.

The nurses swarmed down fire escapes with their charges while flames darted from windows, badly gutted the structure. Bedridden patients were carried to safety on mattresses by smoke-blackened attendants.

Clerks from the registration department checked each patient as he was carried out and nurses continued their dangerous forays into the seething blaze until each one had been accounted for. None was injured and all were taken to a modern building nearby which recently was completed by the institution.

The fire was discovered by patients in a paper chute on the second floor.

FEDERAL FARM BOARD PROBE DEMANDED

WASHINGTON, Mar. 3.—(U.P.)—Asserting that the confidence of the farmers in the Federal Farm Board had been shaken by the Chicago conference which decided to stop paying about $1.16 for wheat, Senator Nye, Rep. N. D., moved in the Senate today for an investigation of the board, its policies and the activities of private grain merchants.

Nye introduced a resolution to have the agricultural committee conduct the inquiry with particular point of ascertaining if the grain trade has sought to defeat the purposes of the board and depress the price of wheat.

Chairman McNary of the agricultural committee said the resolution would be considered tomorrow. In response to a suggestion by Senator Harrison, Dem., Miss., who said cotton has declined as much as wheat, McNary indicated that subject would be included.

Note Seen
The resolution probably will be passed.

Nye read to the Senate a telegram from M. W. Thatcher, St. Paul, general manager of the Farmers' Union, approving the farm board action in buying wheat during the last few months, and loaning to farmers, on a value of about $1.18 a bushel, although it was selling, for less on the market.

This telegram was sent before the Saturday conference at Chicago of Secretary Hyde, chairman Legge of the farm board, and the board's grain advisory committee, at which it was decided to discontinue this policy and hereafter buy and loan on the basis of the current price of wheat.

Farm leaders believe that loss of the farm board's support will cause the market to drop. The Chicago market dropped today.

Policies Reversed
Since the conference, Nye said, he has received telephone calls that the Chicago conference action has caused farm cooperative leaders to change their minds. They believe the board has reversed its policy.

"A large part of the confidence has been destroyed by the conference," Nye said.

Vice-Chairman Stone, of the board, on his return from Chicago today, said the reversal in policy was due to the fact that the private grain merchants were shipping grain out to local elevators to sell as cooperatively handled wheat at $1.18, when the market price was much lower. He said the change was not due to widespread protests from private commission men that the government was running them out of business by paying the higher price. He said the board would continue to advance money to cooperatives, but will not take deliveries of wheat. The loans relieving the carrying charges deducted, he said.

German Cabinet Collapse Fought By Party Leaders

BERLIN, Mar. 3.—(U.P.)—Coalition party leaders tonight negotiated to prevent the collapse of the German cabinet, at least until the end of the week when the Reichstag is expected to ratify the Young plan and the reparations accord with the United States.

Some progress was believed to have been made after the cabinet, in a two-hour session, virtually abandoned the proposed "sacrifice tax" opposed by the Folks party. Finance minister Paul Moldenauer, a Folks party member of the cabinet, went to the meeting prepared to offer his resignation if the socialists and Catholic groups insisted on the measure, which would tax salaried employees to meet an expected deficit in unemployment doles.

Foreign minister Julius Curtius, the other Folks party minister, was understood to have said he would take similar action if the cabinet decided it would resign in a body at Moldenauer and Curtius quit.

The socialists were said thereupon to have withdrawn at least the most controversial aspects of the bill, and the cabinet turned to a detailed discussion of specific direct taxes as a further concession to the Folks party. Thus the meeting passed with the president, usually favoring the president, commented bitterly that only those groups which did not elect Von Hindenburg to the presidency now side with him.

2 WOMEN IN DEATH LEAPS

CHICAGO, March 3.—UP—Two women leaped to dramatic deaths here today. One plunged from the 20th floor of a skyscraper hotel. The other jumped in front of a rushing elevated electric train.

Mrs. Louis Kyckik, 45, dressed at dawn in her room on the 20th story of the Sherman hotel, and after a search of the floor, found an unsecured window in a vacant room. She plummeted down 18 stories to the roof of a two story garage nearby.

A note she left indicated that she feared she was losing her mind.

A few hours later, Miss Catherine Penney, 17, stood weeping on a crowded station platform of the elevated line. Just before an express train thundered by, she toppled over in front of it. A guard made a desperate attempt to save her and almost lost his own life in his unsuccessful effort.

Miss Penney was cashier in a restaurant.

KING GEORGE ILLNESS DENIED

LONDON, March 3.—UP—King George, most probably will hold an investigation in person at Buckingham palace tomorrow. It was said at the Palace tonight.

An official at the palace cited this fact in denying a report that the king's health was failing and that the Prince of Wales had been ordered home from Africa as a result.

"The king is quite all right," the palace spokesman told the United Press.

WALES REFUSES TO RETURN HOME

LONDON, Mar. 3.—(UP)—A suggestion here that the Prince of Wales return from East Africa as soon as he is physically able to do so has apparently met no favor with the Prince and his hunting party.

Admiral Sir Lionel Halsey, private secretary to the Prince, said here today that the latest messages from the Prince's bedside in Nairobi contained no hint that the heir to the throne would return to London soon.

According to Sir Lionel, the messages indicated that the malarial fever of the Prince was running its course and that the royal patient should be "fairly fit" in a few days.

"There is no occasion for alarm," Sir Lionel said. "The King and Queen have been informed to this effect."

CONDITION OF PRINCE IMPROVED

NAIROBI, Kenya Colony, Africa, Mar. 3.—(UP)—The condition of the Prince of Wales, who was stricken by subtertian malaria Saturday, continues to improve, an official bulletin issued at government house said today.

No complications have occurred and the Prince's recovery is expected at an early date, according to the bulletin.

It was revealed that before illness interrupted the hunting trip, the Prince has filmed a battle between two lions and 30 picked Masai warriors in the jungle near Voi.

The warriors, armed with gleaming spears, surrounded four lions and circled them, but two of the beasts escaped. The natives then leveled their weapons at the two remaining animals, both full grown and heavily maned, and stood so until the trapped lions roared and charged. Then the spears flew and the animals fell dead.

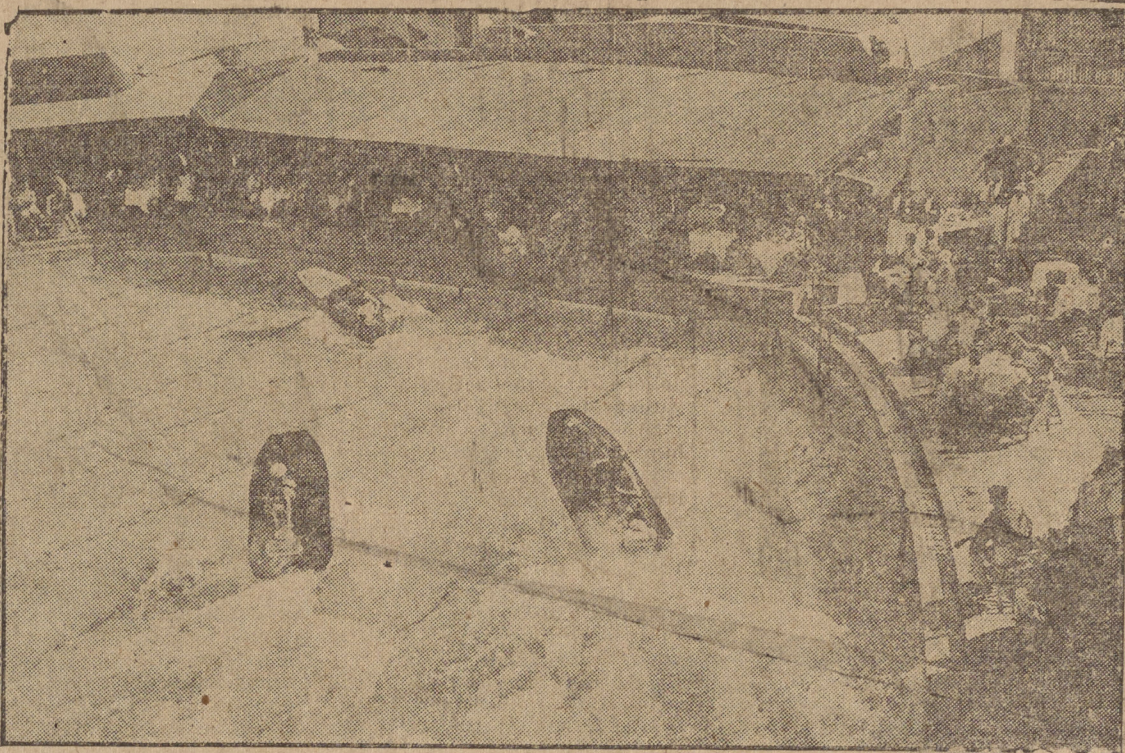

The Prince also filmed an elephant and rhinoceros crashing through the brush. He was unable, however, to bag an elephant with his gun.

Lumber Tariff Beaten By Vote

WASHINGTON, March 3.—UP—Proposal for a lumber tariff, that would have accomplished the same end as the tariff bill amendment defeated last week by five votes, was beaten by a single vote in the senate tonight.

The proposal, made by Senator Hayden, Dem., Ariz., would have authorized the president to levy countervailing duties as large as other countries' duties on the same products. After an hour's discussion it was voted on and the first count showed a victory for Hayden but more senators came into the chamber during the "dinner time" session and voted, making the final result 34 for 35 against.

The rates under Hayden's plan would have been larger than the $2 a thousand feet proposed last week, due to Canada's higher duties, it was said.

Freighter Sends Out Distress Call

SEATTLE, March 3.—UP—The Greater Bellingham, outward bound from Tacoma, Wash., to Manila, via Yokohama, is in distress near the Aleutian Islands, according to word received here tonight.

Advices received here indicated that a part of the freighter's lumber cargo has been shifted causing a decided list. She sent out an SOS call. The Steamer Nevada, which left Portland, Ore., Feb. 15, for Manila by way of Oriental ports was said to be proceeding to the aid of the Bellingham.

The Bellingham is of 4382 net tons and is 379 feet long. She was built at Tacoma in 1918.

COOLIDGE ON WAY TO DAM DEDICATION

GLOBE, Ariz., Mar. 3.—(UP)—Calvin Coolidge was speeding to this city tonight by train from California, to address a throng of thousands who will gather here Tuesday, to hear him dedicate Coolidge dam, Arizona's latest reclamation project.

In dedicating the gigantic wall of concrete and structural steel, the former president will not only officially christen the multiple arch dam, but will bring to a conclusion that which he started in 1926, when he affixed his signature to the bill which made possible the structure.

Indians, in their early day garb, pioneers and prospectors, who knew the spot as only another piece of great arid waste, will be among those who will hear Coolidge speak the few words that will bring the dam which bears his name into official existence.

To Speak
As principal speaker, Coolidge will be introduced at 2:30 p. m. by Gov. John C. Phillips.

Responding to the former chief executive will be several men prominent in bringing about construction of the 220 foot barrier, by which waters of the Gila river will be made to create fertile farms from desert wastes.

The Pima Indians, in gratitude for the work enabling them to irrigate their reservation lands, will induct Coolidge into their tribe as a chief.

Peace Pipe
The Apaches, on whose territory the dam was built, for the first time on record will smoke the pipe of peace with their primal enemies, the Pimas. The Apaches, also, will extend the chieftainship to Coolidge.

After the dam is dedicated officially, tom-toms will beat as the Indian graves of the Apaches, and the toll-loving Pimas, join in colorful ceremonies for the distinguished visitor.

Four full-blooded Indian bands, composed of grandsons of the natives who, years before watched the water go from the stream and who pleaded with the Great Spirit for its return, will play in concert.

Greeting Planned
While Coolidge will be guest of honor at a luncheon to be served on the parapet of the dam, the Indians who will come en masse to join in the celebration, will be feasted.

Tonight, the twin mining cities of Globe and Miami are gaily decorated.

As Coolidge detrains here at 7:45 a. m. tomorrow, he will be met by the largest reception committee that has ever welcomed a visitor to this state. He will be taken to a hotel and after a welcoming breakfast, will be taken by automobile to the dam, 26 miles east of here.

Murdock To Move Office

At the celebration, Dr. George R. Roddes, of San Francisco, past grand master of Masonic lodges will be the principal speaker.

Movie Stars Contribute To U. S. Fine Fund

LOS ANGELES, March 3.—UP—A stampede of motion picture players to pay fines in federal court on charges of attempting to evade income tax payment netted the government a neat profit today.

Eleanor Boardman was fined $2,000 by Judge John M. Killits, after pleading guilty to a criminal indictment.

She was followed by Raymond McKee, comedian, who withdrew a plea of not guilty and was fined $500. Next came Malcolm McGregor and Hallam Cooley, actors. They also were fined $500 each.

Tom Mix, from whom the government claims evasion of payment of $400,000, and King Vidor, husband of Miss Boardman and screen director, probably will appear tomorrow.

The government, after investigation of many film colony tax reports, adopted a policy of routine trial on condition that the evader pay the amount due, plus 50 percent additional and the court fine.

OAKLAND, March 3.—UP—Two men who intimidated eight girls and an office manager of the Rose Bakery company here today before escaping with $1552 from the cash till were sought by police tonight.

One of the girls slipped to a window and saw the bandits leave in an automobile.

All persons in the office when the robbers entered were lined up against a wall but their purses and jewels were not touched.

Supreme Court To Study Attempt To Punish Rum Buyer

WASHINGTON, March 3.—UP—The supreme court today announced it would consider the government's attempt to punish a liquor buyer.

Chief Justice Hughes announced a review has been granted in the case of a New York banker Alfred E. Norris, who was held by lower courts to be immune to prosecution for conspiracy to transport liquor because all he did was to buy the liquor.

The court advanced the appeal for argument on April 14, the earliest possible date which will allow time to prepare briefs.

The case, according to the government, does not involve the right of the government to prosecute a buyer under the Volstead act.

The district court and court of appeal both ruled in this case that purchase of liquor was not a violation of the law, despite the government's contention.

Students Held In Brawl With Traffic Officer

SANTA CLARA, March 3.—UP—The next time that Fred Roerhig Jr., University of California student decides to hit another motorist while out on a spree, he will make sure that his opponent in the automobile jousting contest is not a police officer.

Roerhig, and his companion, Wallace Hampton, both of Oakland, were in jail today, charged respectively with driving while intoxicated and possession of liquor.

The two are said to have been traveling at excess speed and to have passed a boulevard stop sign before crashing into the automobile of Capt. William Emig, of the San Jose traffic detail. Emig and his wife were cut by glass but the captain was never the less able to place the two young men under arrest.

Two girls, Ruth Thompson and Vesta Thompson who were with the boys at the time of the accident, were not held.

Final plans are being made for the annual Richmond Y. M. C. A. banquet to be held next Monday night in the Y. M. C. A. building. Arrangements for the affair are being made under the direction of Reynold Carlson.

Tully Knowles, president of the College of the Pacific, will be the speaker of the evening. A musical program is also being arranged for the dinner.

4 Absent From White Sox Camp

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 3.—Four White Sox players remain out of camp, but no anxiety is felt. The absentees are Art Shires, Smead Jolly, Willie Kamm and Alex Metzler. Jolly is driving here from the coast.

Donnie Bush had planned to hold a practice game today but found the weather too cold and staged the usual fielding, pitching and batting drill.

Herman, Moss Moore Holdouts

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 3.—UP—Babe Herman, Ray Moss and Eddie Moore remained the only holdouts of the Brooklyn Robins today when Harvey Hendrick and Jim Faulkner came into the fold. Two work-outs were held today, despite a high wind.

Miss Hollins In Lead Of Women Play In South

DEL MONTE, March 3.—UP—Medalist honors for the Pebble Beach women's golf tournament went to Miss Marion Hollins, former national champion, here today.

All the scorers were around 20 strokes higher than is customary for the contestants. In the first round of match play Tuesday Miss Hollins, former national champion, will meet Miss Hermine Wacker, San Francisco, who had a card of 106. Mrs. Gregg Lufur, Los Angeles, who was second today with 94, will oppose Miss Rosina Jones, Pebble Beach, who had a 97 after subtraction of a 12 handicap.

Other qualifiers were: 101—Mrs. Vera Hutchings, Vancouver, B. C.; Northwest champion Miss Barbara Lee, Oakland, and Miss Angie Parkhurst, Crystal Springs.

106—Miss Helen Lawson, Hollywood and Mrs. Charles Nicholas, Jr., Chicago.

Before handicap subtracted: Miss Rosina Jones, Pebble Beach 109; Mrs. Edwin Brown, Hollywood 110; Mrs. O. S. Barnett 110; Miss Harriet Hume, Oakland 110; Mrs. A. W. Clapp, St. Paul 110; Mrs. E. M. Rea, San Jose 111.

Goslin, Spencer Desiring Trade

BLOXNI, Miss, March 3.—UP—Washington's principal holdouts, outfielder George Goslin and catcher Roy Spencer, are giving indications that they desire to be traded. The Senator pitchers held a brisk workout today, pitching to batters.

Cold Happers Athletic Camp

FT. MYERS, Fla., March 3.—UP—The Philadelphia Athletics held only one workout today because of cold weather. Pitcher Rommel has recovered from his illness and was in uniform.

CAGE SEASON MAY END HERE THURSDAY

Garfinkle's All-Stars are scheduled to clash with the Hutton Brothers Thursday night at the Richmond union high school in the last game of the present cage season. The 145 pound All-Stars will meet a group of varsity and B cagers from Richmond union high school the same evening at 7 o'clock. The sensational Richmond Y. L. I. team will meet the Petaluma Spartans girls' team at 8 o'clock.

Last Wednesday's cage, a replica of tonight's offering, was announced as the final loop card of the year. However, the excitement created by last week's games caused the basketball directors to organize another group of contests to suit the appetite of the local cage fans.

The Hutton boys, titlists of the Oakland Industrial loop league, were defeated by a fair margin last Wednesday by the Garfinkle athletes and are consequently promising a strong comeback for next Thursday night.

The Richmond 145 pound All-Stars will be especially dangerous Thursday as a result of their unexpected defeat by the high school boys in last week's tourney.

The Richmond Y. L. I. and the Petaluma Spartans are two of the best known and most feared girls' teams of the district. The Spartans lost to the local Y. L. I. by a fair margin, but are still confident that the Y. L. I. victory was due mostly to luck.

"Y" Cagers To Play Army Here Tomorrow Night

The Richmond Y. M. C. A. 110 and 120 pound cage squads will tangle with the Salvation Army cagers of San Francisco tomorrow night in the local Y. M. C. A. gymnasium.

Both Richmond quintets contain some of the best youngsters in local basketball circles, and they will not be easy opposition for the Salvation Army boys.

William Regalia At Tennis Meet

The Richmond Tennis club was represented by William Regalia at a recent meeting of the California Tennis association held at the Bohemian club in San Francisco. The state association is now divided into two sections, the north and the south. Tournaments will be held in each division, and the winners of the division will then meet for the state title.

Bill Johnson is expected to be president of the California Tennis association during the next term. Regalia attended the banquet in place of W. L. Seawright, president of the local tennis club, who was formerly scheduled to represent Richmond at the meeting.

Pittsburgh Pirates Release 2 Players

PASO ROBLES, Mar. 3.—(U.P.)—The first workout of the entire Pittsburgh Pirate squad was prevented by rain this morning. The outfielders and infielders arrived Sunday.

Tommy Heath and Harold McTavish, California rookies, were released outright.

THOMAS NINE BEATS P. S. E. A.

The Thomas Motor diamond aggregation have but one game between them and the title of the Oakland Winter league as a result of their 8 to 5 victory over the P. S. E. A. nine Sunday at First street.

The local outfit played a fast, heady game, and was easily superior to the Oakland boys in Sunday's contest. Syl Campana twirled for the Motors, allowing only two earned runs. Errors by basemen and fielders caused the addition of the other three runs to the Oakland side of the score board.

"Swede" Jensen did high class receiving for the Thomas outfit, while Figueroa handled the bleachers a big surprise by his skill at center in the outfield.

The Thomas Motors are now prepared to clash with the winner of the battle between the Oakland Eagles and San Leandro also held Sunday. If the locals win next week-end, they will be titlists of the Oakland Winter league. If they lose, they must play another contest for the title of the entire league.

Box score: R H E
Thomas Motors 8 13 3
P. S. E. A. 5 8 3
Batteries: Campana and Jensen; Green, Viera and Warren.

ANN HARBOR, Mich., March 3.—UP—Purdue added the Big Ten basketball championship to its conquests of the year tonight by swamping Michigan's quintet 44 to 28 in a free-scoring contest. CARNERA WINS IN SIXTH ROUND

PHILADELPHIA, March 3.—UP—Primo Carnera, Italy's ambulant Alp met the first real resistance of his American tour here tonight but rallied to knock out Ace Clark, Philadelphia negro in the sixth round of a scheduled ten round bout.

Canera took a bad beating in the early stages of the bout and his left eye was completely closed by one of Clark's jabs at the start of the fifth round. The knockout punch—a terrible right to the pit of Clark's stomach—came after two minutes and 28 seconds of fighting in the sixth round.

Canera who outweighed the six foot seven and one half inch negro 270 pounds to 234 1-2 had previously floored his opponent for a count of nine in the fourth round. The bell saved Clark from a knockout but in the next round he again swarmed over Canera and gave as good as he received.

Except for two knockdowns in the fourth round Clark had all the better of the fighting until the time of the knockout.

Giants Hold Cold Workout

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Mar. 3.—(U.P.)—Despite a temperature that hovered around 50, the Giants went through two practice drills today, playing a six inning game in the afternoon, in which the Grays beat the Whites, 7 to 1. Hubbell and Parmelee allowed only four hits between them.

Outboard Club Holds Tryouts At Waterfront

"Oh that I had one of those things" sighed 100 citizens of Richmond as they gazed with longing at 11 tiny outboards skimming across the calm waters of the inner harbor Sunday morning.

It seems that outboard motoring has come to stay in this vicinity. Judging by the increasing number of shells on the harbor and endless faces on its shores. Each Sunday the number of craft zooming over the inner harbor has multiplied and enthusiasts have even travelled from the college city to test their craft on the local waterway.

The Richmond Outboard Motor association has done much to arouse enthusiasm in the sport. The club is now planning to hold races on the harbor within the next few months. The organization is headed by George Lauritzen.

The sportsmen who exhibited their craft on the inner harbor Sunday were: Rex Myers, Bill Thompson, C. E. Marshall, Dr. Francis Kent, Roy Arnold, W. V. Remell, J. R. Patnot, Carl Zimmerman, J. Kennedy, P. Boyd, and E. Hoffman.

San Pablo To Get Tryout With St. Louis Browns

Three San Pablo baseball players will be given their opportunity to play in big league baseball this year.

Willis Butler, scout for the St. Louis Browns, yesterday signed up Bill Rodgers, catcher for the San Pablo club who will report to the spring training camp of the Browns.

Butler has also signed up Babe Sulver, second baseman for the San Pablans, who will report to the Tulsa club and Clarence Ball, San Pablo pitcher, who will go to the Springfield, Mo. club.

Springfield and Tulsa are farm clubs for the Browns.

The three players have been playing first class ball with the San Pablans this year and sport experts declare they are bound to rise.

St Louis Cards Start Training

BRADENTON, Fla., March 3.—UP—Spring training for the St. Louis Cardinals officially opened today with a squad of 39 players engaging in two workouts under the direction of Charles "Gaby" Street, new manager.

Vic Orsatti, younger brother of Ernie Orsatti, was one of the rookies who impressed Street.

COREY 9 LOSES TO P. G. E. PLAYERS

The fast Corey Garage nine was taken into camp by the Pacific Gas and Electric veterans of Oakland with a score of 6 to 3 Sunday on the El Cerrito diamond.

A sudden spurt in the final contest captured the hard-fought contest for the Oaklanders. At the end of the eighth inning, the teams were tied 2 to 2. The electricians then began to connect with Babich's fast ones with fatal results. In spite of the determined last stand of the Richmond youngsters, the Oaklanders were a bit too much for them in that final period.

Babich pitched a fast game as usual, allowing only six hits. Rosano did a nice job behind the platter for the garagemen. The Corey infield and outfield were functioning in fine style, but they had not quite enough speed left for that last inning. One of the big reasons for the visitors' triumph was the clever twirling of Smith of Oakland. San Miguel, Corey second basger became a hero by slugging out a homer for the garagemen. Scarcella also had a big day over the platter for the Coreys, nicking the Oakland hurler for a double.

Sunday's loss was the first defeat that the Coreys have suffered this season. Their opponents for next Sunday have not yet been decided upon.

The lineup for the Corey Garage nine Sunday was as follows: Rosano, catcher; Babich, pitcher; Scarcella, first base; San Miguel, second base; Prolo, short stop; Matteri, third base; Goldsworthy, left field; Chambers, center field; and Klatt, right field.

"I went to the Canned Goods Fair,
The prunes and the tines were there—"

HAVE you, too, heard the Canney racket—the little tin-canned "Sound" organ and jazz numbers, so genially welcomed here by the delicatessen set?

To some theatre interests this is a heart-warming clamor. It means economy for them, hence greater profits.

To persons of sound musical taste, it is ludicrous and impudent—an affront to the intelligence and taste of the theatre-going public. They see in the talkies no excuse for resort to Canned Music.

If you, dear reader, are one of those who recognize that machine-made sound cannot take the place of living orchestras and organists in the theatre, TREAT YOURSELF TO A SIGH OF RELIEF. SIGN THE COUPON BELOW. Then mail it!

of the 'ouse, sir, hand the military gentleman, because of his ldy, but your rooms are hover 'ere, sir, and this man will hattend you."

Traherne nodded a little curly but was others already done, did as he was told. Best carry on, he reflected, none too reassured, and carry on warily and quietly.

CHAPTER XVI
The rooms to which Mrs. Crespin and the two Englishmen had been conducted were in as perfect taste as they were luxurious and were all comfortable, here even more all this than theirs, but all admirable and irrepachable.

But the room to which they were taken, to await the Raja's pleasure and his dinner, left a good deal to be desired, displayed a good deal to regret. The room itself, and the costliness of the deckings, would have discredited no princely house in Europe or New York. Beyond the loggia rose the snow-capped peaks of the distant mountains, rose dappled now by the kiss of the late afternoon sun.

The yellow damasks and the gold tracing did not clash, for they had grown old and amiable together, and time had blended them. The crystal chandelier was there to be sure, but only one, and a crystal chandelier with a difference. Its lines were graceful, its long pendants winked and sparkled pleasantly; and it flooded the great room without dominating it—a great, gorgeous, costly thing, but you could forget it.

In his dining room the Raja of Rukh, if he himself had selected and directed its appointments, had mingled things from many lands and of many times, but they did not blend, and not many of them suited the room itself.

Traherne, coming in, looked at the room without much seeing it, for his eyes were anxiously searching for the Crespins.

They were not there. No one was there. And again he marked time and waited, for the very solid reason that no other course recommended itself to him as wiser.

Two turbaned servants were there laying a table. Traherne saw that they were laying four covers, and that the table appointments were extremely luxurious and entirely European. He turned at the slight sound of a door opened quickly and saw Crespin come in.

"Hullo!" Traherne returned. He noticed how flushed the other looked, and for all his flush how haggard. "How did you get on?" "All right. Had a capital tub. And you?"

"Feeling more like a human being. And what about Mrs. Crespin? I hope she's all right?" "She was taken off by an ayah as soon as we got in—" Crespin said lamely, in the women's quarters presumably.

British and dissipation 'have es- and 'Major Crespin and his wife wife. Who is loved by Dr. Basil Traherne. Traherne offers to take the Crespins to their children in Pa-hari in his airplane. He wants to get Crespin away from the regiment he has disgraced. He loses his way in a Himalayan fog and makes a forced landing in the little known kingdom of Rukh whose natives are hostile. Their Raja appears to be more gracious until he finds a newspaper out of which they had cut an item about three natives of Rukh being under sentence of death for a political murder in India.

Dr. Traherne searched the great entrance hall, looking for Mrs. Crespin beyond her husband. She was not in sight, nor was the Raja. Well, probably Antony Crespin knew where his wife was, had spoken to and was following her—the hall would just beyond the stairs. He started to follow the Major.

"This way, hif you please, sir," Watkins said subserviently, indicating a quite different turn in the vast hall. "The ladies are that side one."

"A devilish strong place before the days of big guns. But a couple of howitzers would make it look pretty foolish."

"No doubt; but how would you get them here?" snapped Traherne. "I wish to God we had them here though!" the physician added passionately, looking with tortured eyes hard on the door, his ears strained to catch a woman's step in the hall.

"I wish we had," Major Crespin assented dejectedly. "I s-y-it looks as if our friend were going to do us well."

A servant came in with a large wine-cooler and put it down. Traherne watched him narrowly, and as soon as the native had gone, Crespin pulled a bottle up from the ice, and inspected its label. "Perrier Jouet, nineteen-o-six, by the Lord!"

He ran an effeminate tremulous hand finger over the already reading gold-toiled neck of the bottle thirstily. He rammed it back into its ice pack, and stroled over to the ottoman, and sank into its cushions. "It's a rum start this, Traherne," he murmured. "I suppose you intellectual chaps would call it romantic."

"More romantic than agreeable, I should say," Traherne muttered, as he picked the small goddess up from the mantle. "I don't like the looks of this lady."

"What is she?" Crespin asked sleepily.

"The same figure we saw in the little temple, whose we landed."

"How many arms has she got?" "Six."

"She could give you a jolly good hug, anyway."

"You wouldn't want another," Traherne said darkly.

For a time there was silence. Traherne's face grew like a dense mask, sweat gathered on Crespin's forehead, and specked his red face. "Where do you suppose we really are, Traherne?" Crespin asked unsteadily.

"On the map, you mean?" "Of course."

"Somewhere on the way to Bokhara. I've been searching my memory for all I ever heard about Rukh. I fancy very little is known, except that it seems to send forth a peculiarly poisonous breed of fanatics."

"Like those who did poor Hare-dale in?" Crespin asked, referring to the crime for which the perpetrators were to be hanged.

"Precisely."

"D'you think our host was serious when he said they were his brothers? Or was he only pulling our leg, curse his impudence?"

"He probably meant caste-brothers, or simply men of his race. But even so, it's awkward."

"I don't see what these beggars, living the back of the north wind, have got to do with Indian politics," Crespin grumbled. "We've never interfered with them."

"Oh, it's a case of Asia for the Asians. Ever since the Japanese beat the Russians, the whole continent has been itching to kick us out."

"So that they may cut each other's throats at leisure, eh?" Crespin asked almost quarrel-somely.

Traherne answered no less so. Any practical or honest would have served them for dire quarrel now—only a woman's peril held them in leash. "We Westerners never cut each other's throats, do we?" he asked.

But still he watched the door. Crespin began a retort, but cut it short, as he saw that the English valet was in the room, and Traherne turning expectantly at the sound saw Watkins, too, and though disappointed was glad. Any interruption was welcome.

WRECKAGE OF PLANE FOUND IN SOUTH

Shay, a posse on horseback left for the canyon, hoping to rescue the three men if they survived or to bring back their bodies.

The wreck, according to Barber, occurred near Rattlesnake Springs and Box Springs, in the vicinity of Silver Creek. Travel in the district is slow and the possemen intended to remain overnight in some mountain cabin if they were delayed.

Barber said he saw the Western Air Express plane circling over the lake region a week ago Sunday. Then, he said, it disappeared.

Saw Ship
"My army experience led me to believe the plane could not make it over a ridge about 20 miles from my home," Barber, a former aviator, declared.

"I thought, however, there was an outside chance that the pilot might have come through safely. When I later heard that a plane was missing, I was able to tramp to a spot near where I last saw that ship."

He said that he set out on foot last Thursday and from a place on a high point of rock examined the country with powerful army glasses. Finally, he said, he located the wreckage in the boxlike ravine, but noted no sign of life.

No Life
"I didn't try to reach the wreck," he explained, "because I could find no indication of life and the tangled appearance of the plane offered little hope that anyone could have come through the crash and fire alive."

The posse left from the Lake Arrowhead settlement, a popular resort, during a rainfall that threatened to turn to snow.

With Dules at the controls, the empty passenger ship was being "ferried" back to Los Angeles after a party had been taken to Kingman. Bad weather was reported over part of the desert route at the time, and in the San Bernardino mountains.

DUNEDIN, New Zealand, March 3.—(U.P.)—Members of Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd's expedition that spent two seasons exploring the Antarctic by airplane expect to arrive here within two weeks, it was said in wireless messages received today.

The messages said the expedition was heading northward after having passed through the ice pack which was so thick this season that for a time it threatened to prevent transport vessels from reaching the Americans at their base at Little America.

A $1.25 to Rid Your Home of Moths May Save You Hundreds of Dollars.
MORTEMOTH KILLS MOTHS

The gas from Mortemoth crystals not only protects your furniture for a long time, but contact with it kills all moths, their eggs and their dangerous larvae in furniture which is already infested.

The proper method of using Mortemoth crystals is to tie them in small sacks, and to place these sacks down in the channel of the piece, as deep as possible, behind the cushions, so that, upon expansion, the gas will spread and fill the spring units in the back and in the bottom of the piece.

When the sacks are empty, fill them again.

DEATH THREAT IN OAKLAND PROBE

"scamped," Phillips declared that concrete work was not done in accordance with the specifications of the concrete.

He asserted that the mixer was allowed to run longer than usual so that the job could be hastened, and that a smaller crew of finishers than was customary, was employed.

Phillips told the jury that the "finishers were incompetent, and I should have kicked the whole crew off the job."

Earlier in the investigation the grand jury had been told how the excessive charges levied against the Columbus Park property owners for the paving work had resulted in the loss of homes and savings which represented the work of lifetimes for many men and women.

Work Curtailed
The jury was also told by Phillips that, after his acceptance of money from the company had been exposed, he received only a little work from the city.

He declared he asked Harry Lesser to help him, and Phillips testified eventually Lesser "fixed things up" so that he had all the city work he could handle.

A. J. Crocker and Lesser, of the California Construction company, and Milton Moore of the Healey-Moore company, when summoned before the grand jury, refused to testify on grounds that they might incriminate themselves.

Deputy Sheriffs J. J. Collier, J. L. Davis and A. B. Shurtlett, indicted jointly on charges of bribery and conspiracy, are to be arraigned before Superior Judge Homer Spence tomorrow morning. It is expected a citation will be served on Sheriff Burton Becker at the same time, charging him with "misconduct in office" on 13 separate counts in an "accusation" returned by the jury last Friday.

2 DROWNED IN SWIM FOR AID

SAN FRANCISCO, Mar. 3.—(U.P.)—Five persons were rescued from their drifting launch in storm-swept San Francisco bay today and learned that two comrades had been drowned in the vain endeavor to bring aid.

Heavy showers and gales from the southeast had defied attempts of a police boat and other relief parties during the night in a search for the missing boat.

When it was finally found by the police boat "Patrol," the woman, child and three men still aboard needed emergency treatment as a result of their distressing experiences, climaxed by the shock of news that their companions, Louis Broman and Elmer McMullen, had been drowned.

Others on the cruise that started from Hunter's Point late Sunday afternoon were Rosemary Halfey, graduate nurse, J. V. Broman, his six-year old son, Bruce, Godfrey Broman and Bruce Tilton.

The gasoline supply of the pleasure craft had been exhausted after dark. Louis Broman and McMullen volunteered to go ashore in a small dory, it soon disappeared from sight of those on the launch and was swamped a short time later by the high waves, tide and cross currents. The bodies were recovered.
